Good food is an essential ingredient of every blue cruise

The welcoming glass of Kir Royale and appetizing canapés on your first evening sets the tone for a week of tempting C. Diem cuisine.

Turkish cuisine is ranked among the world's top cuisine's - right there after French and Chinese. Fresh vegetables and fruit are plentiful, deliciously fresh and lusciously sun-ripened. Bread is a particular treat - freshly baked every day and dangerously more-ish!

Your day starts with a choice of tea or coffee at your bedside (we can leave it outside the door if you prefer). Then follows the traditional Turkish breakfast, consisting of fresh bread with cheeses, olives, honey and jam, yogurt, tomatoes and fruit. Our chef also can prepare a continental breakfast. Croissants, fresh juices, cereals and yoghurt.

A light lunch is next in line - with perhaps stuffed aubergine, rice and salad one day, and savoury pastries stuffed with meat or cheese (börek), accompanied by the traditional combination of yogurt, salt. If preferred the chef makes a seafood lunch.

Afternoon tea takes place around 4pm.

After an early dive in the blues water or some sightseeing ashore , a four course dinner is served. The traditional mezes for the appetite followed by freshly grilled seafood and meats, salads and fruit to finish as the sunsets and stars come up.

Turkish deserts are famous throughout the world. Many of the pastries have are sweetened in honey and are irresistible! Try baklava and kadayif pastries. If you prefer not so sweet, try one of the milk-based puddings such as sutlac (rice pudding) or tavukgögsü (chicken breast pudding).

Local drinks are excellent accompaniments to dinner - try raki with water and ice for a traditional touch, local beer for extra refreshment, or perhaps one of Turkey's range of home produced wines. International wines and drinks are also available.

You can pass the time away sipping any of the number of time-passing custom drinks! Turkish coffee is thick and strong, ayran is a yoghurt-based drink very cool and refreshing. And of course, you couldn't visit Turkey without sipping the national (non-alcoholic) drink tea (known locally as chai). During the day the Italian coffee machine can make any espresso, cappuccino or cafe con leche you want.

During the Day

If you are on a private tour you can shape your course of voyage as you wish before booking.

Usually the daily duration of cruising is not longer than 3-4 hours, and the rest of the day can be spent in gorgeous cove enjoying the sun and the sea.

Sunbathing on the deck, swimming in clear waters, snorkelling, windsurfing, waterskiing or just fishing...

Or anchoring in a cove and trekking in the wild nature, visiting a nearby village and coming closer to the native people and their traditions or visiting one of the numerous ancient sites. Here, in the midst of the idyll, you can feel the touch of nature and history
